September is "Disaster Preparedness Month" and the SOC will recognize that in relationship to children. In July, the SOC presented a workshop at the IAEM (International Association of Emergency Managers) that focused on incorporating the needs of children into disaster planning, response, and recovery. The reality is that many of the children and families that we serve, experience significant trauma on a very regular basis that is then compounded by a traditionally defined disaster such as a tornado or a flood. When people enter disasters already at-risk and traumatized this makes recovery even more difficult. In September, we will be hearing from trauma and disaster experts on how to give at-risk children and families, the best possible chances at successful recoveries.
